1. The informant had occasion in [REDACTED] 1950 to examine the logs of fishing vessels operating out of Rostock (East Germany), looking for traces of any sighting of a wrecked aircraft during August. In the case of one vessel it was found that the log did in fact indicate that she had lost her nets when they had become entangled with an object under water. Before the net was completely torn off, it pulled up from the water the full length of the wing of a plane. The wing was shiny, and gave no indication of having rusted.
2. This incident occurred in [REDACTED] 1950. The position of the vessel at the time was 55° 03' N. and 15° 57' E. (east of the Danish island of Bornholm).
3. The above information is forwarded to you for any interest it may have in connection with the loss of a Navy plane over the Baltic last summer.
